

I Don't Do Boxes

Queer Stories from the South

I Don't Do Boxes is a magazine exploring LGBTQ experience in the Southeast and beyond. Each issue is edited and curated by an editorial team of LGBTQ-identifying youth in North Carolina. I Don't Do Boxes is published at Elsewhere, a living museum set inside a former thrift-store in downtown Greensboro, NC.

Call for Submissions!

Issue Three: Act Out

Now seeking submissions from queer youth who are (or aspiring to be) artists, poets, and writers for the third issue of I Don't Do Boxes, a magazine exploring LGBTQ experience. This issue's theme is Act Out, which will focus on why we do (or don't) act out, what it means to rebel or protest, and all that happens along the way. Selected writings and artworks will be curated into the zine, along with content from our editorial team, and distributed to queer communities around the country.

We're Looking For:

- Essays – lyrics, short stories, creative writing, lessons learned, projects, and work exploring LGBTQ experience
- Artworks – photographs, illustration, and comics and more

Submission Guidelines:

Call for submissions is open to all, priority for queer-identifying youth.

Include contact info, a brief 2-3 sentence bio, social media channels, where you currently live. (You always have the option to remain anonymous, just let us know!)

Please email your submissions to iddb@goelsewhere.org with the subject: I Don't Do Boxes Submission. Preferred file formats: mp3, .wav, .DOC, .RTF, .PNG, .JPG

All submissions are due Friday, May 1st at 5:00pm
