 WEBSITES and PAGES

1000 Journals by Someguy

The online center of the 1000 Journals Project. See scans from many of the journals and track their progress across the globe.

<http://1000journals.com/>

1001 Journals by Someguy

Yes, it's a different site. Due to the popularity of the 1,000 Journals Project, Someguy created 1,001 Journals as a way for people to continue participating in collective sketchbooks.

About Creativity by Dan Brodnitz

The tagline "working artists share what works" pretty much sums it up. The site is full of wonderful interviews with creators who work in visual arts, writing, dance, movies, theater, comics, games, inventions, comics, and cartoons.

<http://about-creativity.com/>

Accidental Creative by Todd Henry

An all-around resource for people in creative professions; put out by a consultancy who's mission is to "free up creatives and teams to do their best work."

<http://www.accidentalcreative.com/>

American Elf by James Kochalka

The daily comic diary of artist and musician James Kochalka.

<http://americanelf.com/>

The Art of Nonconformity (AONC) by Chris Guillebeau

According to Guillebeau, the site is about "unconventional strategies for life, work, and travel." The AONC is also a storehouse of wonderful advice about writing blogs and promoting creative work in all media.

Book by its Cover by Julia Rothman (sketchbook section)

A book-themed blog by NYC pattern designer and illustrator Julia Rothman. <http://www.book-by-its-cover.com/category/sketchbooks>

Daneldon.org by Kathy Eldon

Dan Eldon was an artist, photographer, and activist who was killed in while on assignment in Somalia for Reuters in 1993. Dan's personal creative work included a series of visual journals that make up The Journey is the Destination (listed above in the books section).

Orly Avineri's Blog

The blog and online gallery of California-based artist Orly Avineri.

<http://oneartistjournal.wordpress.com/>

Tommy Kane by Tommy Kane

Kane labels himself "an advertising art director who masquerades as an amateur illustrator." Overly humble, if you ask me. Here's his blog about sketching, which includes plenty of great images of work in progress.
